My Life: I'm Still Hanging in There Michael Vlasek

I'm Still Hanging in There is a second My Life collection of humorous, poignant, and insightful stories about the wonderful people, places, and often unusual experiences I have had the pleasure to enjoy. Drawn from my childhood and often crazy college years, to raising a family, to coaching, playing, and officiating sports, to teaching unpredictable middle school students for nearly twenty years, each story offers a tale of friendship, discovery, and valuable lessons I have learned about life and how there is so much around us to capture our hearts and leave us each day with a smile on our faces.

I have written about driving across the length of Australia, including the Nullabor Plain where we had some unexpected and unusual encounters. I explore hiking the beautiful Salkantay Trek over a 15,200 ft. pass to Machu Picchu. There are funny stories about being a softball umpire and meeting a true-to-life "Wild Thing." There are tales about officiating crazy basketball games, including one for the ages where two girls battled five girls in an unbelievable contest. Together with the other rich stories about children finding their wings and other unbelievable coincidences that had led to unforgettable moments, My Life is a wonderful adventure that will keep a reader laughing and exploring the world in a way bound to make them smile and remember those things which have been so special to them.
