The Instructor's Manual provides you with materials to help organize classroom lessons and interactions. It includes the following: A list of chapter objectives; A chapter outline; Teaching strategies; Critical thinking activities; Answers to the chapter review; Answers to the chapter tests; Chapter tests. New to this edition are correlation charts. The material presented in the student textbook are correlated with the following: AAMA Role Delineation Study Areas of Competence; The AMT Registered Medical Assistant (RMA) Certification Exam Topics; SCANS (Secretary's Commission on Achieving Necessary Skills); The National Health Care Skill Standards. Also new to this edition is the inclusion of the Instructor's Presentation Software and test bank. The presentation software contains PowerPoint transparencies to help you illustrate and review key points from each chapter of the student textbook. Included on the transparencies are a review of key terms, questions to prompt classroom discussion, and critical thinking activities. The test bank will allow you to create your own tests to measure students' knowledge of chapter concepts. It contains numerous test layout and printing options and the capability to edit and add questions. Together, the Instructor's Manual and the student textbook form a complete teaching and learning package. Administering Medications: Pharmacology for Health Careers will prepare the student to enter the health care field with the knowledge and skills necessary to become a useful resource to patients and a valued asset to employers.
